4	Dear Neil, Thanks for your e-mail.
	In my opinion, Japanese food is less popular nowadays because it takes too long to prepare. Having toast and cereal in the morning, for example, is much quicker than cooking a traditional Japanese breakfast of fish, rice, and miso soup.
	I don't think online supermarkets are a good way to buy food because customers can't check the freshness and quality of goods such as fruits and vegetables.
	I feel that giving tips is a good custom. It encourages workers in restaurants or hotels to provide good service.
	I hope this answers your questions. Hitomi
